

Monologues from Andy and Kate's Dinner Party, Course 6: Noise and Blueberries

KATE: This morning I woke up at 6:00am. I have a slight toothache. I'm looking forward to dessert. Yesterday I sneezed on five separate occasions. When I was 5 I was a ballet dancer. When I was 7 I poured a glass of red punch on a classmate. I lived in Spain for 3 years. I'm not sure about the dessert. I have several first names. I'm getting over a cold. I like crunchy peanut butter better than smooth. My favorite jelly is grape. I painted my nails today. My to-do list is rather long. I enjoy swimming. I like blueberries.

ANDY: Do you know what I can't stand? Pop culture philosophy books. Simpsons and Philosophy. Twilight on Philosophy. What happened to reading Hegel, or Lacan? You know what else? You can't even trust your friends. I can't believe there's high fructose corn syrup in soda. Also, what's with all the slow drivers around here? Irritating? – Wine glasses with spots on them!

(Repeat, twice.)
